After 6 months of complaining of not having any post orders, the company gathered all the old memos from the client for security and labelled those the post orders.

–Nathan, security officer

The company is supposed to pay for uniform alterations. I handed my reimbursement request directly to my HR rep. A week later I was told payroll requires a reimbursement form. If they’ve been properly reimbursing officers, how did they not know a form was needed? My client pays for this in their contract, where does the money go?

Discussion Questions

1. What problems about post orders or equipment do you see at your worksite?
2. Why do you think the companies and building owners don’t prioritize these things more?
3. Read the comic on back (based on a true story). What can you do at your worksite to improve these problems?

Know Your Rights:

Our Contract language

- The Company will provide proper equipment and site-specific training to reasonably protect officers.
- Post Orders by necessity are general guidelines and to the extent possible shall reflect site-specific job requirements of the Company and the Client.
